The candidate should have a minimum of three (3) months up to six (6) months prior experience, preferably as a Unit Aide.

A candidate for this position should have a knowledge of geriatric care, and relevant clinical training; the ability to make arithmetical computations and tabulations; have good organizational skills, and be able to establish and maintain effective working relationships with other employees and the general public.

Physical & Mental Requirements

Work is performed primarily in a moderately noisy setting at a nursing home, with exposure to outdoor weather conditions, toxic or caustic chemicals, moving mechanical parts, risk of electric shock, and risk of radiation up to 1/3 of the time; exposure to extremes of heat and cold up to 2/3 of the time; and exposure to fumes or airborne particles and illnesses more than 2/3 of the time. There is some risk of personal injury, especially when working with disoriented and/or combative residents and when exposed to bodily fluids there is the risk of infection.

Physical demands generally involve sitting, climbing or balancing, or stooping, kneeling, crouching or crawling up to 1/3 of the time; reaching with hands and arms up to 2/3 of the time; and standing, walking, talking or listening/hearing, use of hands, and use of backs and legs for lifting more than 2/3 of the time. Frequently weight is lifted or force exerted up to or more than 100 lbs. related to daily lifting and moving of residents. The position has normal vision requirements. Equipment used includes medical equipment.

Job Environment

Work at this level involves standard practices and procedures which may require additional interpretation. Judgment is needed to locate, select and apply the most pertinent practice, procedure, regulation or guideline. Duties involve a variety of sequentially related steps and processes. The action and steps to be taken are generally apparent, or readily comparable to previously encountered situations, differing according to apparent factual differences. The incumbent is expected to exercise initiative to resolve most situations encountered, referring difficult cases to a supervisor. Errors made could result in personal injury or delay or loss of service.

The incumbent may have occasional contact with the public through visits of families and friends of residents. Other contacts may be with other county personnel, doctor's offices, and nursing home staff. Contacts occur in person and through use of the telephone.

Supervision

Incumbent receives direct supervision. Assigned work is performed independently following established procedures. Supervisor is available to resolve unusual problems. Specific instructions are given for new or non-routine tasks. Work is reviewed on a spot-check basis, or through further processing for technical accuracy and compliance with requirements. Written and oral guides in the form of standing operating instructions and processing procedures guides are available and cover most situations encountered. A substantial portion of them may be recognized, and there is little interpretation necessary. When instructions do not apply, problems are referred to the supervisor.

The incumbent may have full access to confidential patient care records. Work changes can generally be anticipated, except in emergency or crisis situations. Incumbent works on a fixed shift and is generally required to work alternate weekends.
